IRÈNE LAUB

Art, at its most powerful, challenges our ways of seeing. In Shifting and Displaced, José Pedro Croft invites us to question our habitual perceptions. His works encourage a humbler mode of attention – opening our senses and intellect to new ways of seeing and feeling the world. Croft's elegant artworks gently slow us down and yet keep us in motion, involving us fully in their subtle transformations.

José Pedro Croft (b. 1957, Porto) trained as a painter at the Lisbon School of Fine Arts, but his practice also incorporates sculpture, drawing and etching, each medium informing the others. His steps are only temporary resting points in an ongoing process of revisiting and recreating – a never-ending search for what feels, even if only momentarily, like the right distance from where to move forward. His work mainly explores the instability of form and questions the apparent self-evidence of geometrical shapes. In open series of permutations and fragmentations – where construction and deconstruction meet – Croft goes beyond static minimalism by embracing movement, paradox, and intuition.

Lives and works in Lisbon (PT)

José Pedro Croft is one of the major figures of the renewal of Portuguese sculpture. His career, both as a sculptor and as a draughtsman, has been characterised from its earliest stages by a painstaking constructive process that combines a rigorous formal universe with a dynamic play on perception. His work always intertwines the visual, plastic and poetic dimensions of the objects he creates.

José Pedro Croft's sculptures develop complex relations with their surroundings and with their own shapes and volumes by means of simple, almost minimalist structures. His creations combine the material nature of the object with its formal aspect and, in some cases, the latter is strengthened by the use of industrial paint, suggesting sculpture perceived as painting in relief. Furthermore, the artist uses mirrors and glass to play with effects of light, shadow and reflections in order to create new volumes and an altered sense of space, eventually giving rise to a dialectical tension between fullness and emptiness that may also be found in his works on paper. José Pedro Croft's architectural compositions, whether three-dimensional or flattened on paper, are always built on delicately balanced shapes and on the dichotomy of positive and negative space which, for the Portuguese artist, "reflects the transitory nature of the universe".

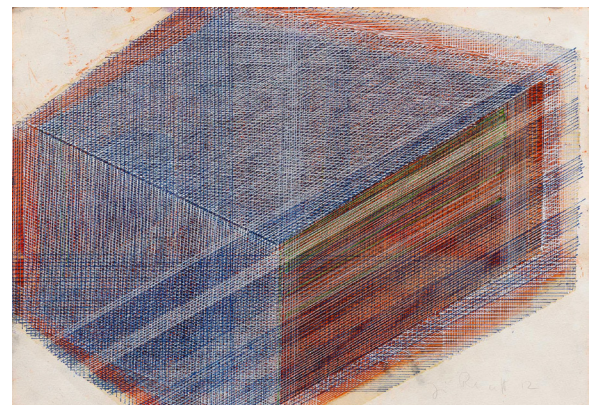

While, in José Pedro Croft's own words, the interest of his practice "lies in its nuances and in the little differences, not in any attempt to pigeonhole it within a specific line of work", he quickly became a leading figure of the contemporary Portuguese art scene. He was chosen to represent Portugal on the occasion of the 57th Venice Biennale, in 2017, and his work can be found in the collections of Centre Georges Pompidou (FR), Albertina Museum (AT), Serralves Foundation (PT), Calouste Gulbenkian Museum (PT), Luso-American Foundation (PT), Secretary of State for Culture (PT), Berardo Museum (PT), Caixa Geral de Depósitos (PT), Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía (ES), Fundació La Caixa (ES), Banco de España (ES), Museu de Arte Moderna do Rio de Janeiro (BR) and Pinacoteca of the Sao Paulo state (BR) and others.
